Cookies

This website, like many others, uses small files called cookies to help us improve your experience. Cookies are small text files that are stored by the browser (for example, Internet Explorer or Safari) on your computer or mobile phone. You can think of cookies as providing a 'memory' for the Web page, so that it can recognise you when you come back. A visit to website may generate the following types of cookie:

Session cookies:

Websites have no memories. A user going from page to page will be treated by the website as a completely new visitor. Session cookies allow you to proceed through many pages of a website quickly and easily so any page changes or item or data selection you do is remembered from page to page.

Anonymous analytics cookies:

Every time someone visits our website, software provided by another organisation generates an 'anonymous analytics cookie'. These cookies can tell us whether or not you have visited the site before. Your browser will tell us if you have these cookies and, if you don't, we generate new ones. This allows us to track how many individual users we have, and how often they visit the site. We cannot use these cookies to identify individuals. We use them to gather statistics, for example, the number of visits to a page.

Manage cookies:

It is usually possible to stop your browser accepting cookies, or to stop it accepting cookies from a particular website. All modern browsers allow you to change your cookie settings. You can usually find these settings in the 'options' or 'preferences' menu of your browser.
